Did you know?

The image of God defines the dignity of the human being – already in the bodily state – as being good. The goodness of the body especially consists in the fact that in our relationships, through the body, we are able to express ourselves as persons. We receive this ability as a gift from God. The human body is able to receive into itself the Spirit of God; and so, the Apostle Paul refers to the human body as the “temple of the Holy Spirit” ^{1 Cor 6:19}. Here lies the mystery of the body and the fullness of its destiny. This is why Christianity regards the human body as a temple, consecrated for the service of God and neighbour.
